1 [The idea of transporting tons of radioactive waste across the country to a depository in Yucca Mountain Nevada is dangerous. We have seen the results of an oil spill. What will the result be if a truck is in an accident and releases radioactive waste in a highly populated area? What if a train derails in a populated area? These may be worst case scenarios, but, they inevitably will happen. What about the protection of the drivers from radiation?

In addition, the host community does not want the waste. The Shoshone consider the site sacred. Would we put a depository on a sacred Christian site? I think not. This is in total disrespect for the native inhabitants of the region.

In short, this is an environmental disaster waiting to happen. It is total disregard for the religious beliefs of the neighboring community.]
